What is an Ombuds?

The university ombuds assists people attempting to resolve a university-related issue or conflict. The ombuds is independent of the university’s formal administrative structure and serves as an alternative source for information and advice about issues related to the university.

The ombuds is a neutral party who provides confidential assistance in an impartial and objective manner. The ombuds cannot impose solutions but will identify options to help you effectively resolve your concern.

The ombuds can advise you of policy avenues within the university but cannot offer legal advice. The ombuds cannot advocate for any individual or serve as a representative or witness in hearings or other formal proceedings. Communication with the ombuds does not constitute “official notice” to the university.

Concerns often brought to the Ombuds include:

- Academic Issues
- Incivility or bullying
- Harassment
- Cultural conflicts
- Faculty/student disputes
- Grade appeals
- Workplace issues
- Faculty/staff disputes
- Retaliation
- Unethical behavior
- Grievance policies & procedures
- Privacy Issues
Contact the Ombuds when you

✓ Have a situation requiring help in communication or negotiation
✓ Are unsure which policies, procedures or regulations apply

✓ Have a non-university related disagreement or problem
✓ Want someone to advocate for you (i.e., take a side) in a dispute

The WNMU Ombuds

An independent, neutral, confidential, and informal information resource, offering guidance when you don’t know where to begin, offering help when regular channels don’t seem to be working, or helping identify which policy or procedure applies.

An alternative option to the formal grievance processes or other channels of redress open to students and employees.

May listen to, investigate, and seek to resolve complaints concerning administrative or academic policies, procedures, or practices.

Identifies alternative ways to address a problem or issue or other offices that may assist in your situation

Assists any member of the WNMU community in the resolution of academic, administrative, or personal issues or problems.
